HUMAN CONSUMATION WHITE CORN

BRASILIA, BRAZIL — Brazil is forecast to produce a second straight record corn crop in 2019-20, matching last year's mark of 101 million tonnes, according to a Jan. 9 Global Agricultural Information Network report from the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

Corn exports in 2018-19 are estimated at a record 37 million tonnes, almost 50% higher than the previous season as a result of the much larger harvest, which was 23% higher than in 2017-18.

The USDA's 2019-20 corn export forecast for Brazil projects an 8% decline to 34 million tonnes.

Total corn area is estimated at 17.5 million hectares, a 5% increase over 2017-18, according to the USDA.

According to data from Brazil’s agricultural statistics agency, CONAB, almost every Brazilian state that grows second-crop corn saw expanded area, improved yields and double-digit percent growth of production volumes in 2018-19.

“Brazil is expected to increase domestic consumption in the upcoming marketing year as the livestock industry expands to meet Chinese demand and the burgeoning corn ethanol industry continues to grow,” the USDA said.

Brazil is the world’s third-ranked corn producer behind the United States and China and the second-ranked exporter behind the United States.

SOJA

The world's largest exporter of soybeans, Brazil is expected to continue to expand production and sale of soybeans despite the challenging scenario on global trade.

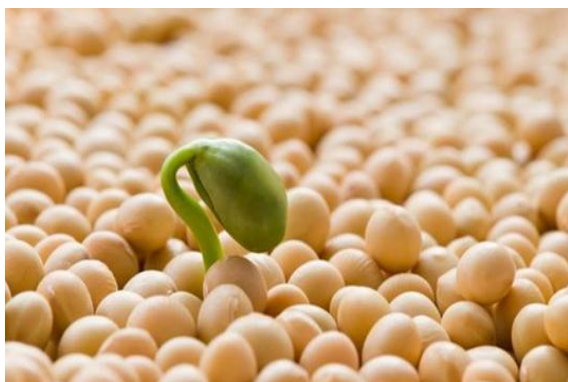

According to the US Department of Agriculture (USDA), the good momentum of Brazilian production is expected to continue for the upcoming 2018-2019 harvest. The USDA predicts that Brazil will have a record-high soy harvest in the vicinity of 120.5 millions of tons.

Still according to the US agency, Brazilian soybean production will also benefit from unstable foreign trade relations at the global level, especially due to the trade clashes between the United States and China.

SUGAR

Sugar is one of the most popular products worldwide and an essential ingredient in many of our favourite foods and drinks.

Brazil is by far the largest producer of sugarcane and the biggest exporter of sugar in the world.

In fact, when sugarcane was introduced to the country more than 500 years ago, it was almost as valuable as gold.

It's no wonder that a great deal of scientific research has gone into sugar production, including finding ways to better protect this valuable crop from insect attacks.

MEAT – BEEF

The country produces almost 7 million metric tons of beef each year from a total population of 165 million head. One “missing picture” in the Brazilian cattle industry though, is that of a North American-style feedlot. Only 4% of the cattle killed each year are “fattened” in feedlots.
